After receiving a WWHF research grant, awardees have:

1. Research Grants
   - Earned more than $100 Million in research grants. WWHF awardees have gone on to receive hundreds of prestigious local, regional, national and international grants including highly competitive funding from the National Institutes of Health, Veterans Affairs, Center for Disease Control, National Cancer Institute and more.

2. Research Publications
   - Written nearly 600 research papers published in peer-reviewed publications and are extremely active and respected in their professional fields. They provide peer review services and serve on editorial boards for hundreds of professional journals such as JAMA, American College of Physicians and American Journal of Medicine.

3. Patents
   - Obtained or applied for five patents.

4. Textbooks
   - Written nearly 70 textbook chapters.
ABSTRACTS & PAPERS
Contributed more than 500 abstracts or papers to national and international research and medical conferences.

PRESENTATIONS
Given nearly 300 presentations in their field of expertise, nearly tripling the number of regional, national and international presentations they gave prior to receiving the award.

REVIEW COMMITTEES
Sat on grant review committees for dozens of prominent funding sources including: Center for Scientific Review, National Institutes of Health and National Cancer Institute.

AWARDS AND HONORS
Received more than 70 awards and honors for their service, professional and research contributions.

MEDIA OUTREACH
Provided public health outreach in their various fields. Their research and expertise has been covered in national media outlets including: National Public Radio, New York Times, Los Angeles Times and Runner's World.

OTHER CONTRIBUTIONS
Moderated international panels, chaired symposia, organized scientific meetings, served as research mentors, taught classes, provided medical care, given TED talks, overseen departments and provided answers to today's toughest women's health challenges.